We believe hate is not charitable.

In November 2023, the WF Board adopted an Anti-hate Funding Policy that ensures no funding will be directed to organizations that engage in hateful speech or activities. Scan with your phone camera to read more.

Community impact fueled by generosity

The person with a charitable heart. The neighbor who shows up for their community. The employees who give to amplify impact. The grantees who step up to spark change, moving Wichita forward.

The Wichita Foundation’s work is powered by our donors – people, families and businesses who flex their charitable muscles to strengthen our community. In 2023, you were among those who unlocked opportunities to fuel citywide impact and action on emerging local needs:

335 fund holders & donors

Mobilized $6.8M in grants

Supported 364 nonprofits

Established 15 new funds

The following pages share a glimpse of WF fund holders igniting philanthropy to create a brighter future for all Wichitans. The momentum will continue in 2024.

We wanted to do something that made the most impact on people and on the future of the community.

John Foulston, WF fund holder

Empowering sustainable solutions

Local couple supports the community through charitable mantra

Teach others the skills they need to create lasting and transformative change in their lives. That’s the mantra that propels John and Peggy Foulston’s charitable giving.

The couple’s commitment to philanthropy has a strong family legacy; the Foulston Donor Advised Fund at the Wichita Foundation was established in 1993 by John’s father, Robert C. Foulston. The Fund’s gifts have supported basic human needs, women in crisis, and education to name a few.

As the Foulston Donor Advised Fund accumulated in value, John and Peggy decided in 2023 to mobilize a larger gift to equip people with sustainable solutions.

“We wanted to do something that made the most impact on people and on the future of the community,” said John Foulston, WF fund holder. “We felt we didn’t really know all the opportunities that were out there.”

The Foulstons turned to WF staff to uncover local needs. After reviewing opportunities with WF’s Director of Engagement, James Woods, the family discovered a local nonprofit that aligned with their philanthropic goals.

“Helping people help themselves is the charitable giving that we want to focus on,” said Foulston. “It looked to us that Family Promise of Greater Wichita was focused on just that – preparing people for the long-term.”

Family Promise of Greater Wichita (FPGW) has since received a total of $450,000 from the Foulstons – the largest gift the organization has received since its founding in 2016.

The gifts, made in memory of Robert C. Foulston, allowed FPGW to purchase a new building as well as fund renovations to create a safe and inviting temporary home for families in crisis.

“This gift not only empowers families to overcome homelessness and achieve sustainable independence but sets our organization up for long term stability as well,” said FPGW’s Director of Development and Community Engagement Beth Schafers. “We can continue to grow the programs and supportive case management that is changing the future for families across our community.”

The Foulston family hopes to continue supporting other nonprofits.

“Working with WF staff has been very helpful,” said Foulston. “Being able to connect with James and have him do all that research helped make sure our gift made the most impact.”

I would like to make meaningful contributions that will have a lasting effect.

A legacy in philanthropy

Bill DeVore and his spirit of generosity lives on

William (Bill) DeVore was no stranger to philanthropy. He grew up watching his parents give to nonprofits through their private foundation, the DeVore Foundation. Their model of generosity inspired Bill and his brother, Richard (Dick) DeVore, to establish the DeVore Family Fund at the Wichita Foundation in 1987.

This legacy of giving will continue for the DeVore family, even after Bill's passing in December 2023.

“Bill loved Wichita,” said Alta DeVore, Bill's wife. “He wanted to give to make our city a better place for everyone.”

Bill had a long history of volunteering in the community. He served on many fine arts boards, including the Wichita Symphony, Music Theatre Wichita, Friends of the Wichita Art Museum, the Wichita-Sedgwick County Historical Museum and the Wichita Arts Council.

In the beginning, the DeVore brothers donated to organizations with which either they or their father were associated. Their collective giving evolved over the years to expand on nonprofits outside of the fine arts.

The Kansas Children's Service League, Kansas Food Bank, Rainbows United, Senior Services and Wichita Children's Home are a few of the nonprofit organizations that recently received grants from the DeVore Family Fund.

Since inception, the DeVore Family Fund at WF has granted more than $2 million to local and nationwide nonprofits.

Bill has passed on his philanthropic flame to the next generation of DeVores. The DeVore Heritage Fund at WF is a vehicle for Bill and Dick's children to make their own contributions in the community.

When asked what his vision for giving was in 2018, Bill responded that he “would like to make meaningful contributions that will have a lasting effect.”

“Our family will continue his spirit of generosity,” said Alta. “In each act of giving, we honor the profound impact that Bill had in Wichita, ensuring his legacy lives on.”

Alta DeVore, Bill's wife, wants to continue giving to the community, in honor of Bill.

Sparkling generosity in the workplace

The Cox Communications of Kansas Charitable Fund at WF enables employees to make a local impact through charitable contributions

Cox Communications has a long history of partnering with organizations to address community needs. It began with their founder, James Cox, who believed in the value of investing in the communities they serve. More than 100 years later, that culture of giving surges throughout their organization to fuel statewide impact.

Through the Cox Communications of Kansas Charitable Fund at the Wichita Foundation - the philanthropic arm of Cox Charities - employees are involved in the process to mobilize grants to nonprofits.

“Our employees care about the communities that they live and work in,” said Cox Communications Senior Manager of Public Affairs, Mandy Wilbert. “Cox Charities is both funded and guided by Cox employees so we can focus on local community needs and help improve our children’s education.”

The Cox Charities Advisory Council, a diverse group of local front-line employees, serves as the program’s decision-making body. The council ensures grants are aligned with the company’s mission and two primary grant programs:

- Education – supports programs and curriculum that promote students’ academic success and enhance the educational experience.
- Community investment – supports nonprofit programs and services in the areas of youth, education, social issues and the arts.

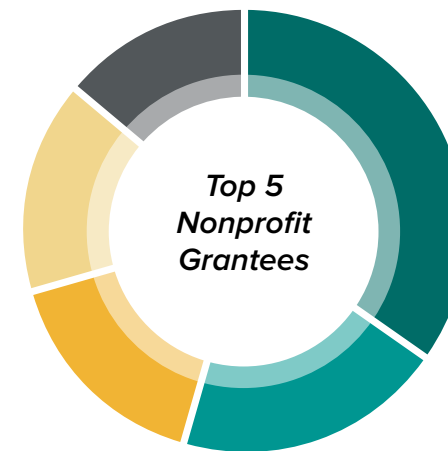

Cox employees’ generosity has helped build strong communities by enriching the lives of Kansas residents in education, technology, social issues and the arts. The Fund has granted nearly $1.5 million since its inception in 2015.

“One thing that makes Cox such a special place to work is the giving spirit and culture our employees have created around coming together for the greater good,” said Wilbert. “When we feel connected to our communities and connected to each other, our impact takes on a much greater meaning.”

The Wichita Foundation has a strong focus on addressing local community needs and partnering ensures that our philanthropic efforts have a meaningful impact on our Kansas communities.
